Verify applicants' employment instantly online

Verifying a consumer's employment is vital in today's economy, but doing so can be a time consuming administrative burden.

When applicant volume increases, waiting on verifications can create bottlenecks that kill productivity and open the door to shortcuts and missed steps that undermine your due diligence. You need a trusted third-party to validate consumer information that moves just as fast as your industry and provides you with data that is authentic and current. You need Equifax Verification Services.

Equifax Verification Services is the industry leader in employment verifications. We leverage The Work Number®, the nation's largest database of instantly available employment information, to deliver actionable data with unparalleled speed. A proprietary Equifax resource, The Work Number database houses employment records contributed by more than 5,500 employers nationwide, including over 75% of the Fortune 500 and the majority of the federal government civilian employers. This information is updated at every payroll cycle, so you always receive the most current information possible.

Turn to the experts for manual verifications

If an applicant's information is not available instantly through our database, a researched verification can produce the desired employment verification, generally in as little as 1-3 business days. As a leading provider of researched verifications, Equifax follows a uniform and auditable process in verifying employment. Skilled agents independently validate the employer's phone number and location, and provide you with a detailed report of how we completed your verification. Our processes, call centers and fulfillment technologies are purpose-built for verifications, and our extensive working relationships with HR departments at tens of thousands of employers helps us deliver critical data to you with unparalleled speed and efficiency.
