

YOU WANT [TO BE A BIOMEDICAL SCIENTIST.]

WE'LL BUILD YOUR FUTURE.

The Master of Biomedical Science (M.B.S.) degree provides students with a broad background in the biomedical sciences, along with laboratory experiences and research skills. The curriculum is designed to prepare and graduate students who have extensive knowledge, technical skills, and expertise to function in a variety of biomedical professions.

- The M.B.S. degree program is a full-time, 21 month program.
- All students take a required set of classes in basic science, medical ethics, and research. A series of electives and independent studies is available that allows students to further specify an area of interest to better prepare them for a career in their chosen field.
- Students take a series of research courses that prepares them for completion of a research project and a thesis.
- Unique opportunities exist for students to present at conferences, submit publications to scientific journals, and do research with medical school faculty.
