

Your partner for special needs trusts

Raymond James Trust has an experienced, dedicated team for special needs trust administration.

For anyone wishing to provide long-term security for a loved one with a disability or special needs, or the recipient of a legal settlement or jury award whose government benefits eligibility would be impacted, a special needs trust can be vitally important.

That's why, at a time when some trust companies are shying away, Raymond James Trust remains committed to working with legal and care professionals to administer special needs trusts.

We're like you – dedicated to serving our clients.

More and more people are realizing the need for – and importance of – special needs planning and trusts. We've known all along.

And we're still here.

WHY WE DO IT

Our parent company, Raymond James, was founded on the belief that clients deserve someone to help them plan for their financial futures – not just buy stocks for them. Raymond James Trust has the same core values.

A special needs trust is designed, in part, to preserve and supplement a beneficiary's needs-based government benefits while benefiting from and enjoying trust assets to further enrich their lives. We think everyone seeking to provide for a loved one with a disability or special needs deserves a professional team committed to serving a client's best interests.
